James Latham in Scotland

It's been two years since James Latham reached over the border and opened a 40,000 ft² distribution centre in Scotland.

The purpose-built site at Eurocentral in Lanarkshire opened its doors in April 2008 and offers a comprehensive range of panel products and hardwood timbers, many of which are available with FSC certification. The range includes all grades and sizes of MDF and Birch Plywood, Spruce and hardwood plywood, Flamebreak, veneered fire door blanks and a full range of Latham branded Finesse grade veneered MDF. The highly popular HI-MACS[®] solid surface is also available plus Bausen Hardwood flooring and Hardwood decking. In addition, a full range of solid hardwoods including Oak, Beech, Black Walnut and Maple are available as are many red hardwoods such as Sapele, Majau and Utile – all readily available from stock.

Comprehensive Stock

James Latham has always had an enviable reputation in the timber industry and the new site provided ease of access to many existing and new customers in Scotland. As a result, businesses can be provided with daily deliveries and collection facilities. Furthermore, the depot proudly holds the most extensive stock range in the area.

David Landsburgh, Scotland Site Manager, said: "In 2007 James Latham celebrated its 250th year in business, a proud boast in any industry. It is a highly respected brand both here in Scotland as well as south of the border and the decision to open this first site outside England, here in Lanarkshire, reflects just how important this market is to us. We're ideally situated at junction 8 on the Glasgow to Edinburgh M8 motorway, strategically situated 35 minutes between each city which gives us great access to the key areas in Scotland. Our delivery and collection service is a key area that the depot has seen significant growth in over the past two years due to the fact that it offers a prompt turnaround service."

Andrew Wright, Director at Lathams, added: "Over the past couple of years we have established a team of knowledgeable and well trained staff with a wealth of experience in the Scottish market. Our employees are all renowned for offering customers the confidence that requirements can be met, which is paramount during these competitive times. We intend to continue our policy of recruiting experienced people and look forward to welcoming more new faces as we expand further in the future."
